Carnot as a Carpenter.

The President of France is a first class carpenter, and can handle the saw and plane as well as any mechanic It was at Chabanals, in the Charente, where his father possessed a chateau, that he learned the trade. Carnot, senior, insisted that all his childre should learn some occupation; "there is no telling," he used to say; "you may want it some day, for we live in strange times." So Carnot, junior, was put to the beach, and, according to his professor, one M.
